

The German documents in this publication are presented in their original form including the original spelling. Only obvious misspellings have been tacitly amended. With very few exceptions neither later corrections nor marginal notes have been taken into account. Again with very few exceptions the documents are produced in full length. Since the purpose of appending the German documents is to provide for a convenient comparison with the English translations, as a rule, there are no editorial comments. Yet, this rule has not been strictly adhered to. Editorial interventions in the text are as usual marked by square brackets, occasional omissions, mainly due to poor readability of the original, are indicated by “<...>”. Emphasis within the text is printed in italics. Smaller type sizes have been used in order to adapt the information provided to tabular size, or to follow the pattern of the original, or to indicate headlines being in the original positioned on the margin. Editorial notes are printed in italics.